Organize the best climbing competition ever!

This is “just” what the FFME, in charge of the Climbing World Championships organization at the AccorHotels Arena from the 14th to the 18th of September 2016 – is promising for this climbing world summit.

It is time to introduce them.

Five days of competition. The four climbing disciplines. The 500 best climbers worldwide competing to win one of the 16 gold medals (at least). This is the 2016 Climbing World Championships scenario that will be staged in the biggest arena of the country: The brand new AccorHotels Arena.

An exceptional venue for the main climbing competition. “For the moment, they are our Olympic Games!”, states Nicolas Januel, the bouldering French coach. “Not a single international competition can be compared to Bercy.” shares Corentin Le Goff, his counterpart for lead climbing. Both of the French coaches know something about it: they were at the bottom of the walls in 2012 during the first Climbing World Championships organized in Paris-Bercy.

An opinion widely shared by the athletes. “Of course the World Cup circuit is very important, but the World Championships have clearly a greater dimension for us. It is the climbing world supreme title that is at stake during a few minutes of competition”, tells Romain Desgranges, one of the biggest lead climbing specialists in the French team.

“Successful and spectacular World Championships are one of the best arguments in favor of our discipline. Bercy perfectly fulfilled this role in 2012. I have no doubt on the fact that the teams of the FFME, which will participate in the organization of the next edition, will succeed in fulfilling again this mission”, concludes Pierre-Henri Paillason, managing director and national technical director at the FFME. A vision shared by Pierre You, president of the FFME: “I am not afraid of saying it: we organized the greatest climbing competition in the world in 2012. We had only one wish since then: do even better!”

EDITORIALS

Four years after the unforgettable 2012 World Championships, Sport Climbing is back in September, in Paris Bercy, at the newly renovated AccorHotels Arena. This unique venue will feature the highest level of competition climbing by top athletes and para-athletes from around the globe.

The 2016 World Championships is the main calendar event of what has been a fantastic year for Sport Climbing: a rich World Cup, the World Youth Championships, the 1st World University Sport Climbing Championship, and of course, the fantastic decision by the IOC to include Sport Climbing in the Tokyo 2020 Olympic Games.

Our sport is riding high, capturing the attention of the youth - and not only - worldwide, with its amazing and natural movements. The possibilities for growth are endless, as climbing is a human instinct. We are all committed to climb higher, stronger and faster, under the Olympic Values.

Marco SCOLARIS,
 President of the International Federation of Sport Climbing

After the success ringing of the 2012 Climbing World Championships, France is happy to welcome again - from the 14th to the 18th September 2016 - this competition organized by the International Federation of Sport Climbing.

The consecutive organization of two World Championships shows the excellent health of the French Federation of mountain and climbing and its efforts to register climbing in the olympic program and to contribute to the success of the application of Paris for the organization of the Olympics in 2024.

The Climbing World Championships will be organized within the framework of the «new» AccorHotels Arena, where more than 20 000 spectators will be expected. Sport largely practiced, dynamic and spectacular, climbing gathers a public who shares enthusiasm and strong educational and sport values. During this international event which will gather more than 500 athletes who come from 50 different countries, the AccorHotels Arena will welcome four kinds of climbing competitions: lead, bouldering, speed and paraclimbing.

The FFME, represented by its President Pierre You and by the National Technical Director Pierre-Henri Paillason, has been committed for several years on the path of performance and development. The success of paraclimbing's integration in the competition during the last World Championships was an example of this successful alchemy.

I particularly want to thank the investment of all, managers, elected representatives, volunteers and technical frames who will, I am sure, make this event a success for the climbing community, for Paris, for the Region of Île-de-France and for France.

 Director of Sports

The FFME is delighted to celebrate the 2016 Climbing World Championships in Paris. We organized the best climbing competition in the world in 2012. We had only one wish since then: do even better!

We are very proud to present again paraclimbing at the same time as the other disciplines. This strong commitment shows our will to promote the practice of this sport to everyone, the public and the climbers. I want to thank all our partners, volunteers, athletes and spectators who contribute to this unforgettable competition.

The organization of this international sports event is a new decisive stage for sport climbing. After the decision of the IOC to add sport climbing to the 2020 Olympics in Tokyo, hosting such event will be an opportunity to promote once more our sport constantly increasing and to reaffirm the sports and educational values that it conveys.

Let's all support the sports in the Île-de-France region!

There are more than 6 million of inhabitants in the Île-de-France region who practice regularly a physical activity. Because sports take an important place in the everyday life of the region's inhabitants, we choose, besides the world's actors of sports, to make it a strong axis of our regional politics.

Today, the Île-de-France Region is a major partner of the sports movement.

We wish the biggest success to all of you, climbers, organizers, referees and volunteers of the 2016 Climbing and Paraclimbing World Championships. May this event be a sport celebration for all the Île-de-France's inhabitants.

& paraclimbing

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I am very happy to welcome you in Paris, in the new AccorHotels Arena, for the return of a big climbing international competition. Indeed, after the World Championships in 2012, Paris is very proud to have the World Championships this year again.

As you know, Paris is this year on the center stage of the international sports again. In addition to its candidacy for the organization of the Olympic and Paralympic Games in 2024, we successfully hosted this summer the Euro of football while waiting for next year and for the male handball World Championships in January, the male hockey World Championships in May and the wrestling World Championships in August. Other big sports events such as the 2018 Ryder Cup and the 2018 Gay Games but also the 2019 women soccer World Championships will reinforce Paris as the worldwide sports capital that is hosting major sports events.

Welcoming the Climbing World Championships is also a great opportunity to promote and expand the sport.

This sport that is now on the program of the Olympics in Tokyo 2020, conveys values of perfection, surpassing oneself, but also environmental protection. Rapidly expanding, sport climbing has already been part of the Parisian sports landscape for a long time, with 12 artificial structures, including two new gym walls in La-doumègue (19th) and Beaujon (8th) inaugurated recently. But we also wish to bring the development and the interest around this sport by installing climbing modules in public places, to make Paris even more an open-air playground.

Finally, welcoming the Climbing World Championships is also something to share with the Parisians, a show of high intensity with incredible performances.

I wish you all a very nice climbing week, and I send my most sincere encouragements to all the competitors.

OLYMPIC GAMES

The IOC officially accepted the inclusion of Sport Climbing in the Tokyo 2020 Olympics Games!

Marco SCOLARIS, President of the IFSC: "We are so happy that Sport Climbing will be participating in the Games of Tokyo. The Olympics have been our dream for quite some time, and now the hard work has finally paid off. We would like to thank the IOC for extending a truly unique opportunity to our sport."

Pierre YOU, President of the FFME: "An anomaly has just been corrected: one of the most natural movements of the human body - climbing - is now in the Olympics! It is the outcome of many years of hard work from the international federation and its members. We are delighted at the FFME!"

Shared values

Sport Climbing embodies core values of the Olympics Movement. It is an exciting, healthy and affordable sport which can be practiced on all five continents. Women and youth are well represented, and persons with disabilities participate as well. The sport is growing in popularity.

The journey continues

Although the road to official approval has concluded, the work is far from finished. Many steps must be taken to prepare for the upcoming Tokyo 2020 Olympic Games.

Pierre-Henri PAILLASSON, National Technical Director and Managing Director at the FFME: "It is a new step for sport climbing, which was already in a nice dynamic. It is a very good news for the top level and the French teams, but also for the development of our federation and our practices."

What about athletes reactions?

Gautier SUPPER, lead French team member: "It is a nice reward considering the IFSC investment over these last years. The consequences of this decision can be very important for all of us. With a bigger media coverage, we are going to be able to share our passion with more people, it is a very good thing!"

Romain DESGRANGES, lead French team member: "2020 is still far away and there are still some competitions to participate in, in the meantime. But it is a big news: it is now our job to show to the public that sport climbing is a beautiful sport with its values and athletes involved."

Anouck JAUBERT, speed French team member: "The inclusion of sport climbing in the Olympics Movement testifies its major evolution over these last years. It should help accelerating its development, with more resources, a framework, media coverage, passion... As an athlete, it makes me dream! It is an opportunity to have our sport discovered by a large public, and to make the French people vibrate by winning medals! It is the beginning of a new era!"

LEAD

The aim is to go as high as possible on a 15m wall. Climbers have a limited amount of time (6 minutes in qualifications and 8 minutes for semi-finals and finals) for their attempt. In semi-finals and finals, the climbers have no prior knowledge of the route (they are said to climb "on sight"). They do not see the previous climbers' attempts (unlike in qualifications) but there is a collective observation time (6 minutes).

Male and female climbers have different routes.

Handholds can be:

- Controlled and stable: the height is recorded by way of the last controlled hold;
- Used: the climber has controlled the hold and begun to move towards the next hold (in which case the height will be recorded with a "+").

Competition organization

Qualification: two qualifying pools, split according to international rankings over two routes: the 13 best climbers from each pool qualify.

Semi-final: one semi-final route: the 8 best climbers qualify.

Final: one final route.

The routes are modified between each round.

Ranking

This is dictated by the height achieved by the climber.

DISCIPLINES

PARACLIMBING

In July 2011, the IFSC embraced disability in sport, organising the first ever Paraclimbing World Championships in the history of climbing. Since then three Paraclimbing World Championships have taken place (Arco 2011, Paris 2012 and Gijón 2014), enabling the discipline to firmly establish itself in the climbing world.

Climbers are belayed on top rope.

Male and female climbers have different routes.

Competition organization

The number of categories that will be featured, will depend on the number of climbers enrolled and the number of countries represented.

Two qualification routes per category (the number of qualifiers will depend on the number of participants)

One final route

Ranking

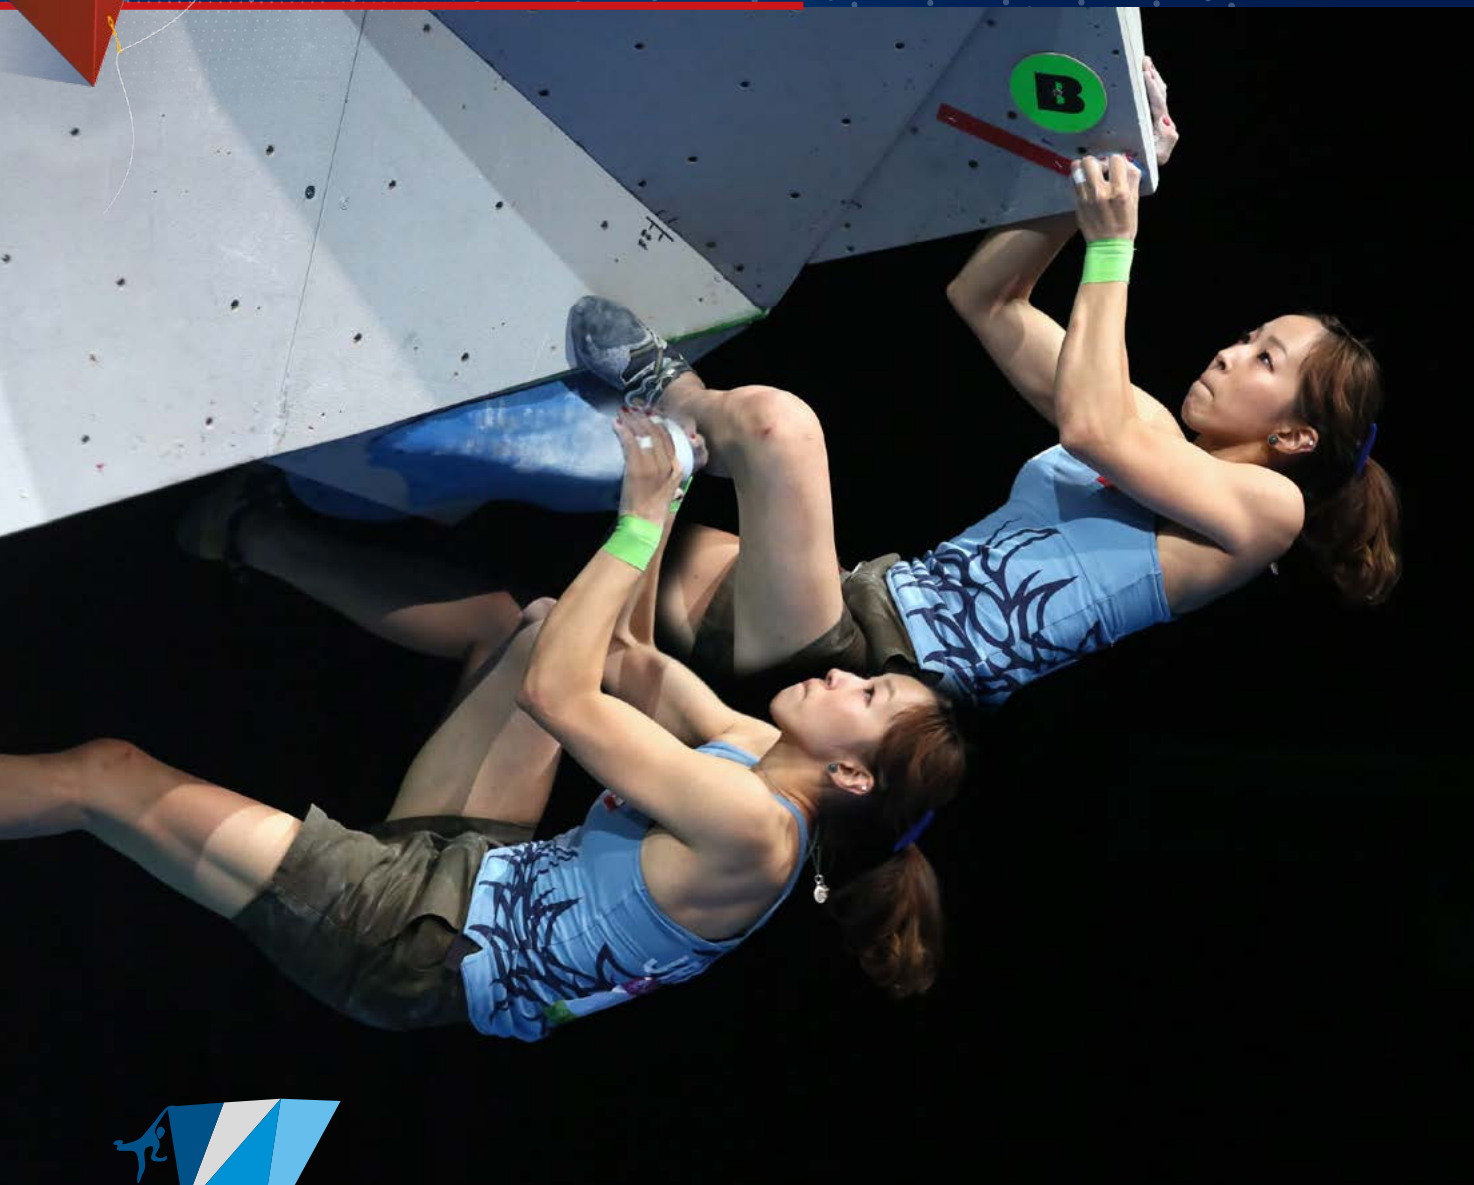

This is dictated by the height achieved by the climber (see Lead).

BOULDERING

The aim is to solve (complete) the most problems in the least amount of attempts over a given period of time, on several 4m structures, equipped with safety mats.

The climbers have a specified amount of time (5 minutes in qualifications and semi-finals, 4 in finals) in which to attempt each problem in turn.

Male and female climbers have different routes.

Competition organization

Qualification: One qualifying round (5 problems) with two pools (as for lead): the 10 best climbers from each pool qualify.

Semi-final: One semi-final (4 problems): the best 6 climbers qualify.

Final: One final (4 problems).

Ranking

This is dictated by the number of problems solved. The climber to solve the most problems wins. If there is a tie, the number of attempts is counted. If there is still a tie, the number of bonus* holds is taken into account and then the number of attempts to reach the bonus*.

Intermediate holds in the problem, identified by a colour code.*

WORLD CHAMPIONSHIPS
CLIMBING
& paraclimbing

15

Speed

The aim is to be the fastest to get to the top of a 15m high wall.

Competition organization

One Qualification phase: each climber has two attempts in which to lodge the fastest time possible. The best 16 climbers qualify.

One final phase: depending on their ranking after the qualifications, climbers will face off 2 by 2 (the 1st against the 16th, the 2nd against the 15th, etc.) in 8th finals, quarter finals, semi-finals and finals.

Ranking

The climbers duel in pairs on absolutely identical routes. The winner is the first to arrive at the top of the route.

Records

For the last 9 years, there has been a homologated standard 15m wall, the only one that enables records to be validated.
